GENERAL MOTORS says it is not going to make airplanes. This column predicts that General Motors, eventually will make airplanes. Messrs.
Sloan, DuPont and their able engineers and ambitious super-mechanics will not remain out of that which is designed to be the world's most important, and perhaps greatest industry.

A FEW years ago Henry Ford told this writer "the airplane is not a commercial success, and I am not going into that field." Reminded that the automobile was not a commercial success, either, when he made his first little gasoline buggy, Mr. Ford reported that he would not make airplanes.
He is making them now, sold nearly a million dollars worth last year. And while he loses money on every machine he will make money eventually.
Meanwhile he renders a great service to his country. And his three-engine plane is a good, safe, all-metal machine. Get one.

PROFESSOR NORTROP of Yale says the world must look to an induc-tive philosophy of science for a solution of the problem of religion. "Science only can tell us whether the universe as we know it provides any concrete meaning for the claims of religion."

SCIENCE and religion are and must remain separate. Science gradually reveals to men that which they can explain and understand. Religion, which changes as man's civilization changes, represents the effort to know and understand that which men can never know or understand. Religion, destined to remain a matter of faith, never to be proved, is at least as important as science. Science gives knowledge, safety and wealth. Religion gives peace.

FRIEDRICH WILHELM, formerly Crown Prince of Germany, calls Mussolini "a genius who has arisen optunely in Europe, where so many metallicities are sprouting." Mussolini is doing what the Hohenzollerns would like to do.

NEW YORK school teachers are ordered to give children instruction in the harmful effects of alcohol. That order, based on a law 25 years old, is especially necessary with the modern brands of whisky. Formerly children were warned that they might avoid whisky when grown. Now, unfortunately, the warning is needed to keep them from whisky in high school.

Reina gave her life early today in a vain attempt to save her six months' old baby from flames that spread from a kitchen stove in their home here. The baby, Frank, Jr., died in the fire and Mrs. Reina succumbed in a hospital.

Neighbors attracted by the woman's screams found their efforts to add her blocked by a locked door, which was finally broken down by a taxicab driver.
The kitchen was a roaring furnace, but the chauffeur rushed in and dragged Mrs. Reina to the hallway.
When firemen subdued the flames
the baby was found dead in its crib.

BEAT NEW PHILLY

Bellaire and Coshocton
Also Battle for Final Entry.

NEW CONCORD, March 10.—East Liverpool high school's basketball team, a strong favorite for the district championship as a result of its showing in the first two rounds, faces probably its biggest hurdle in the week-end title race in its semi-final game this afternoon with Dover, 1927 state champions.

Nosing out Cambridge in their first game and walloping New Philadelphia 26 to 10, last night in the second round, the proteges of Coach Joe Hurst were still in the running as the field narrowed to four contenders.

In the upper bracket, Bellaire and Coshocton will fight it out also on this afternoon's semi-final schedule.
Coshocton got there by defeating Toronto and Martins Ferry. Bellaire trounced Marietta and Bridgeport.

Dover, winning from Steubenville in its opening game, finished ahead of Zanesville, a former state champ, last night in an overtime contest, the score being 31 to 29.

This is the quarter that goes on this afternoon in the next to last act.
Bellaire and Coshocton are scheduled to start play at 2 o'clock.

The East Liverpool-Dover fray is slated to follow in one hour.
The winners will return to the Muskingum college court tonight at 8 o'clock for the final scrimmage and that winner, then will prepare for a trip to Columbus next week for the Ohio finals.

"Lifer" Who Killed
Patrolman, Believed Fatally Shot.

OREN HILL HELD

One Penitentiary Aide
Arrested; Two Others Accused.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 10.—J. L.
Whitfield, lifer at the Ohio state penitentiary, who escaped early this morning, was probably fatally shot here today when he was captured at the residence of a guard, Oren Hill.
Whitfield was placed in the prison hospital at noon. He had been found guilty of first degree murder of Patrolman Dennis Griffin, of Cleveland.

When Whitfield's absence was discovered at 6 A. M. today Warden Thomas ordered guard Hill to be confined in the penitentiary, and dispatched his secretary, Daniel Bonzo, and a city detective to Hill's residence.

Shortly before noon Bonzo and the detective were assured that Whitfield was hiding in an upper room. When they battered down the door, they reported, Whitfield was discovered. He was armed with a long butcher knife, which he held, as he raised his arms above his head to signify surrender.

Fugitive Shot Twice.
As the men approached the fugitive, his captors reported, he dropped his arms and sprang at them. Both men fired, they said. One of the bullets, ploughing through his abdomen, and the other taking effect in his side.

Hill's wife was at the residence when the officers arrived, and told them a man was in a room upstairs, but that she knew nothing further.

Warden Thomas reported that he had played the hunch of searching Hill's residence when he was told that Hill brought a bundle into the prison when reporting for duty last night.

COLUMBUS, O., March 10.—Leonard L. Whitfield, 37, Cleveland, serving a life sentence for the murder of Dennis Griffin, a Cleveland policeman, escaped from the Ohio penitentiary at 2 a. m. today, it was announced by Warden Thomas. Whitfield fled from a dormitory where 250 woolen mill workers were under the guard of three men, and after changing his prison clothes for civilian dress, made a rope ladder of his bed clothes, and dropped over the penitentiary walls.

Warden Thomas, who is investigating, said that several suspensions of guards would result.
Warden Thomas reported that Whitfield had had inside as well as outside assistance in his escape.

HOLD AGENT ON CHECK CHARGE

G. E. Faber, Dayton, Faces False Pretense Count.

Charged with obtaining money under false pretense on information filed by Julius Erlanger, clothing salesman, G. Edward Faber, 36, Dayton insurance policy expert, was held for trial at 10 o'clock Monday morning under $10,000 bond by Municipal Judge J. C.
Hanley today.

Faber, who was arrested by Chief of Police McDermott of this city and Chief Fultz, Wellsville, in Third street, Wellsville yesterday afternoon, where he was to meet a Sallenville man, is alleged to have given Erlanger a bonus check for $20. According to McDermott, he also passed a check on the Thomson House here.

The prisoner claims to be working for his father, Charles W. Faber, of Ohio, who maintains an insurance policy investigating office at 217 Third Street, Arcade, Dayton. The company, according to literature found in Faber's grip, "investigates insurance companies, examines policy holders' advices on all insurance matters and adjusts losses for manufacturers and business men."

In his grip were found contracts and insurance policies of a half dozen or more pottery manufacturers, whose insurance the company was investigating. He also held scores of contracts showing him to have worked in other Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania's common fires.

These policies were turned back to their owners by the police.
Faber told Chief McDermott that he had given a "party" in Pittsburgh recently which cost him $300. He admitted having given young Erlanger the forged check when he "went broke." Faber called his father by telephone last night, advising him of his arrest. His father, the suspect said, will come here tomorrow in an effort to arrange a settlement of the charge.

They gave the names: Paul Edward Macmakin, alias Lefty Lewis, alias Zip Lewis, 26, Youngstown; George William Golden, alias Pank, 20, Youngstown; Jack Blair, 25, no address.

PULLMAN PORTER TIPPING UPHELD

WASHINGTON, Mar. 10.—Pointing out that congress has infrequently legalized the practice of "tipping" Pullman car porters, the interstate commerce commission yesterday dismissed the plea of Pullman porters and maids for a wage increase, holding it was without jurisdiction.

The decision declared that tipping "was practiced long before congress began to regulate interstate commerce."

Fully 173,000,000 cigars were sent from the Philippines to the United States in 1927, and it is expected that many more than that number will be shipped this year.

In spite of a decrease of 21 percent in production as compared with 1926, this country shipped 20.3 percent more automobiles to other parts of the world last year.

Mack Has Fined In Blond Ghost Fans Believe

Ossie Orwoll Gives A's New Conception of Speed.

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 10.—Training camp fans believe they have learned why Ossie Orwoll, the expensive piece of baseball bric-a-brac the Athletics bought from Milwaukee was nicknamed the "Blond Ghost." When Ossie flits over the greenward or flies around the bases in a Mack traveling uniform he resembles a grey, streaking shadow of ghostly dimensions.

Ossie was a 10-second man at college, and only two years out of his alma mater, he sails over the terra firma like his Viking Norse ancestors sailed over the seven seas. Orwoll has given the A's a new conception of speed.

And yet it is not his speed that is most impressive to the wise and knowing old heads that shape the plans of the Mackian strategy. Connie Mack, Kid Gleason, and Ira Thomas rave about his "form," his grace and manner. Orwoll, they chirp, handles himself with perfect form.

Always Balanced
Lithe and slender, though he weighs about 170 pounds, the westerner is always balanced. A born ball hawk, Orwoll seems capable of filling any position on the diamond except possibly that one handed so efficiently and brilliantly by catcher Mickey Cochrane.

Having already played regularly at first base, the outfield and on the pitching knoll, either in college, on the sand lots or in the minors, Orwoll has worked out at second, short and third base here in camp. At each position he has shown himself a fast and almost flawless fielder and displayed an arm of steel.

The same grace that distinguishes his actions on the field, he carries into the batters' box. Orwoll has a graceful swing and like a few other of the game's greatest stars looks good even when he fails to connect. Connie Mack just at present is figuring on the westerner as the third southpaw of his hurling staff. In the box he is not quite so impressive as he is in the field. His fast ball is not quite as explosive as Lefty Grove's or Walberg's. But he has good control and seems able to work the corners with more than passing accuracy.

Orwoll is of the second American born generation of a family of Norse ancestry. Son of a Lutheran minister, Ossie was born in Portland, Ore. When he was only a few months old his family moved to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where his father was pastor of a church. It was there that the new Mack star became noted as a scholastic athlete.

In School Days.
He played first base during his school days and also at a normal school in Sioux Falls, and when the war came along enlisted in the 47th Field Artillery of the 16th Division. He was in the service for 11 months without getting overseas. Discharged he enrolled at Luther College the same institution that had graduated his father in 1895.

Orwoll was a four-letter man at college, being a member of the track, baseball, football, and basketball teams. It was here that he first blossomed forth as a pitcher, alternating his first two years between the mound and first base and the last two between the mound and the outfield.

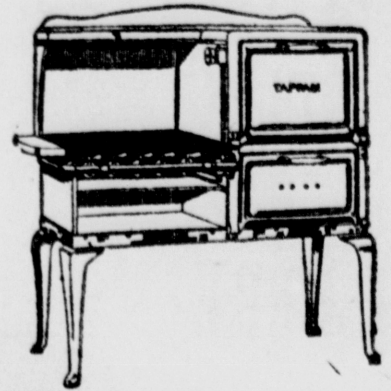

From college he drifted into semi-pro ranks, played a month in the Dakota league and returning to independent baseball at La Crosse, Wis., signed with the Milwaukee Brewers in the fall of 1925.

SINCLAIR OPALINE MOTOR OIL

Seals Power at every Degree of Wear

A DROP OF AIRPLANE OIL WILL STOP A WATCH

"TICK-TICK-TICK"—a drop of oil . . . then silence. The oil stops the watch . . . yet it is airplane oil of the highest quality.

The trouble? Simply that airplane oil—even the best airplane oil—is not the correct oil for watches. It does not fit the spaces that call for lubrication.

That's worth thinking about—if you drive a car! Because the same principle holds true . . . that the oil which is absolutely correct for one car may be incorrect—wholly incorrect—for another!

When new, two cars of the same make and model are as alike as peas in a pod. But after one car has been driven a thousand miles, and the other twelve thousand miles, these cars are widely different in their motor oil requirements! Wear from mileage has made them different! Wear from mileage has widened that space between each piston and cylinder wall where oil does its biggest job! It must always seal that space to prevent the power from blowing by! And the grade of oil which does the job in a new car will not do after the speedometer shows 2,000 or 12,000 miles!

Here's where the correct grade of Opaline does an extra service—it seals that space and prevents your power from blowing by. That's the sound basis of the Sinclair Law of Lubrication.

Buy Opaline according to mileage! Get the right grade of Opaline, to fit the degree of wear in your car at the present time! It's the way to get constant piston seal, which means maximum compression and power . . . greater security and economy of operation . . . more mileage from gasoline . . . less dilution and sludge . . . less carbon trouble . . . less wear and lower repair bills . . . increased pleasure and satisfaction in driving.

Opaline is all that a good motor oil should be for the present-day engine and properly applied gives you the extra service of complete piston seal!

To get precision in your lubrication, tell us your mileage—and we will sell you the correct grade! Having the right grade of motor oil is just as important as having the right quality. It is our responsibility to see that you get both!

*The Sinclair Law of Lubrication: For every machine, of every degree of wear, there is a scientific Sinclair Oil to suit its speed and seal its power.

Auto As Killer

Judging from federal statistics showing the toll exacted by mines, railroads, motor vehicles and airplanes, flying is by all odds the safer, despite the prevailing opinion in the public mind.

Mining is a hazardous occupation, but cold figures prove that the man who digs the fuel for the American consumer does not run as much risk of losing his life as his neighbor who rides in an automobile.

With the exception of the pedestrian, who is menaced by the 24,000,000 automotive vehicles now operating on streets and other public highways in this country, the branch of the human family which owns a car flirts with death more often than his or her fellow citizens.

Every time the clock clicked 42 seconds in the United States during the last five years, one person was killed or sustained injuries, for Uncle Sam today reported that in this period 3,446,370 persons were injured and 114,870 were killed in traffic accidents. So great has been the toll that every year the automobile exacts a casualty list more than twice as great as that incurred by the American Expeditionary Force in the World war.

On the other hand, according to the federal bureau, 2,224 persons were killed, 1,735 in accidents in bituminous and 459 in anthracite mines last year. As the figures, which may be increased on account of injuries which may yet prove fatal, now stand, the mine death rate is 3.75 per million tons of coal production.

These statistics, overlooked in the greater amount of newspaper space given an airplane crash or a mine disaster, should prompt the motor car driver as well as the pedestrian to exercise more care when on the public highways. It pays to stop, look and listen at street intersections as well as railroad crossings.

Letting Bars Down

The United States court of appeals at New York has handed down a decision to the effect that residents of Canada who are employed in the United States may cross the international line without being made subject to immigration regulations.

This decision will have a far-reaching effect at Detroit, where hundreds of men and women are employed in various industries and offices and stores, but who maintain their residence across the river in Windsor and other Canadian towns.

The decision was based on the John Jay treaty of 1794 between the United States and Great Britain, which was interpreted as granting residents on either side of the border the privilege of crossing and recrossing daily to transact business, without the usual immigration restrictions.

Word comes from Washington that no attempt will be made by the Labor department to alter the immigration regulations at the Canadian line as a result of the New York decision, but the decision itself will be immediately appealed to the supreme court. The court of appeals' decision overruled the United States district court at Buffalo, where it had been held that the word "business" in the treaty between this country and Great Britain meant only trading and merchandising.

Should the supreme court sustain the court of appeals' decision, officials of the Labor department admit the federal regulations at the Canadian border will have to be modified.

The Canadian border problem is only one of several other immigration affairs now puzzling the Washington government. There is a movement afoot in congress to place immigration from Mexico and other North American countries on a quota basis, but the senate committee investigating this matter has been told that at least four of the federal departments look with disfavor on the proposed legislation.

Secretary Kellogg is represented as being afraid such a move will affect friendly relations with neighboring republics on the south.

There isn't any question but that some of the states in the southern tier of the United States need the labor which is imported from Mexico and other Latin countries. If a means could be evolved to bring about a regulation of this immigration so that it might be restricted to those men and women who can be assimilated with the least trouble, perhaps such regulations would be worthwhile.

To arbitrarily shut off immigration, or put it on a quota basis, however, does not seem to solve the problem.

In reference to Canadians who immigrate to the United States it would not be wise for congress to place that nation on a quota basis at all, or otherwise restrict immigrants who come up to the usual tests of sanity, health and the like. The Canadians are an Anglo-Saxon people easily assimilated and usually good citizens. They do this nation no harm.

Bees at School

The school trustees at Stony Creek, Ontario, started something new last year when they voted to introduce a hive of honey bees in the school house.

Their idea was that the children would profit, educationally and morally, by observing the busy little bee improving each shining hour. The hive was built with transparent glass walls, so that every phase of the inmates' activity could be freely observed. For some reason or other, bees don't seem to mind such abuse of their privacy any more than goldfishes do. Provision was made so that the bees could come and go about their usual business without hindrance.

It is now reported that the plan works admirably. That hive has been a focus of attentive observation from the day it was installed. The children have learned a great deal about bees and bee culture, and that part of their time at least was well spent, even if they didn't apply the bees' industrious example to all the rest of their school work. So the hive is going to be continued as a part of the school's equipment.

The bees made good, too, in another way. The honey they gathered and stored not only sufficed for their winter needs but provided a surplus which, when sold, more than paid for the original investment and the running expenses of the hive.

It seems a shame that it was considered necessary to sell that honey, even for the thrift lesson it taught. The children should have had the surplus honey to eat with their lunches.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—Thanks to the American spirit of business and to the rise of literacy in this country the art of writing has come into its own from the commercial standpoint. Today a writer is more certain of getting his work published than ever before and what is chiefly remarkable, he can get paid in advance for his short story, book, play, or movie scenario provided he can point to any previous work.

The book purchases of the American people are reaching astounding proportions. Even though the country is well supplied with public libraries and with private circulating libraries, actual sales continue to gain. Nor are sales confined to the cheaper editions. Good books have been made available in all manner of forms. Classics can be purchased for as low as five cents a volume but the $2.50 books also are selling as never before and the sales of books ranging up to $10 are very substantial.

Unless there is some special reason such as the fame and popularity of the author, the subject or the novelty of the book, there is always an element of chance in a publication. This the publisher must assume. There seems to be no way to determine whether a novel will be successful and if so when. The works of Conrad are especially interesting in this connection. Novels of his which did not sell at all when they were new, years later became best sellers. One of the most popular novels of recent years was Beau Geste. Yet this book was published and on the market for approximately a year before it enjoyed much of a sale. After having been neglected for months it achieved popularity overnight and for no very apparent reason.

In contrast to that there is Thornton Wilder's book, The Bridge of San Luis Rey. Although very much out of the ordinary, more of an essay than a tale, but in the form of a novel, this book gained instant attention despite the fact that the author was practically unknown. He had written one book before and now, of course, because of the great popularity of the new book, people are going back to read the first one. Wilder can get advance royalties now.

Royalties are paid on a sliding scale. The standard novel is priced at $2.50. The usual author's royalty is ten per cent on the first 10,000. On the next 5,000 he will probably get twelve and a half per cent and fifteen per cent on all copies over 15,000. This scale may be altered by special agreement. Publishers are in keen competition and where a popular author has written a book for which the public is waiting he can, if he desires, shop around and make almost his own terms.

Trader Horn was an experiment but there is no doubt that, the experiment having proved highly successful, almost any publishing house would give excellent terms on more of the same story.

ABROAD With McIntire

PARIS, March 10.—Nothing is quite so disappointing as Paris night life these days. Of course, it is off season, but even so it is below the average of nocturnal gaiety. So much so the famous Zelli's has been locked and boarded up for three months.

Zelli's is comparable to Texas Guinan's when she was going full tilt. Customers never left until the sun was dappling the boulevards through the chestnut trees. Joe Zelli is an Italian who came to Paris via New York and was immortalized in an old Smart Set story: "Next Door to Zelli's."

He does not greet patrons with "Hello, Sucker!" His formula is different. He stands at the entrance, and when a party enters calls to his head waiter: "The royal box for the Prince!" The tightest of tightwads will not roder beer when he thinks he has been mistaken for a member of nobility.

Many haunts still open at midnight for the fugitive patronage. The gigolos are there, and so are the "for hire" dancing girls, but the tables are mostly empty. Paris is becoming a daytime town, and even tourists are following the Parisian custom of early to bed.

Josephine Baker, the dusky Harlem performer who became one of those sporadic "rages," has her own club, but it was half empty the night I was there. Josephine sat at her table with her reputed Italian count, a dapper young person who could pass for Michael Arlen. I feared for his mustache. I thought he would twist it off.

Four other clubs, popular last year, were only one-third filled. The only American I saw in any was Earl Carroll's brother Jim, who sipped a cup of coffee and was merely there to see an Argentine dancer with the idea of booking her for America. "Slick little mortuary chapel," he observed dolefully.

Near Place Pigalle there is a wicked place for those caring for such. It opens at 1 a. m. and drinks are served by girls whose costumes cannot be described for the simple reason they do not wear any. But that is old stuff in Paris. Night life may grow better. It cannot grow worse.

The perfume salons of Paris offer a fragile beauty and grace, but one cat-cornered from the Volsin cafe on rue St. Honore can only be described as exquisite. The entire two-storied front is solid plate glass, save for a narrow nickel support running its width at the second story. The door, too, is glass inset in the nickel sill. I stood in front of it for ten minutes overwhelmed by a destructive and perverted urge to hurl just one brick. I may do it yet if the hotel waiter doesn't stop putting watercress on fried eggs at breakfast.

At Sherry's—where I have found the only good coffee in Paris—came the Leo Owellis, having just arrived from honeymooning at St. Moritz and trying to achieve the nonchalance of settled married folk. Mrs. Owellis is Maybelle Manning, one of New York's fashionable modistes, and Mr. Owellis is a newspaperman who became vice president of one of New York's largest banks.

This evening I stopped in at 46 rue Nicolo to see Ralph Barton, the ace of American caricaturists, who has taken up permanent residence in a beautiful French home. He is married to an accomplished musician and composer of Paris, receives in a drawing room the size of a skating rink and sports a swell Italian car. There is also a brick walled garden with cool gravel paths and—well, I wish I had had the foresight to take up caricaturing.

The French waiter is summoned with the sucking noise we use to call a dog. They don't mind it at all, but scowl at the American custom of tapping the table with a fork.

One misses the veteran scribe. "Hank" Wales, about town. He knows all the places but has departed for Moscow to see what news items he can pick up. From what I hear of Russia I don't envy him.

Auto As Killer

Judging from federal statistics the toll exacted by mines, railroads, motor vehicles and airplanes, flying is by all odds the safer, despite the prevailing opinion in the public mind.

Mining is a hazardous occupation, but cold figures prove that the man who digs the fuel for the American consumer does not run as much risk of losing his life as his neighbor who rides in an automobile.

With the exception of the pedestrian, who is menaced by the 24,000,000 automotive vehicles now operating on streets and other public highways in this country, the branch of the human family which owns a car flirts with death more often than his or her fellow citizens.

Every time the clock clicked 42 seconds in the United States during the last five years, one person was killed or sustained injuries, for Uncle Sam today reported that in this period 3,446,370 persons were injured and 114,870 were killed in traffic accidents. So great has been the toll that every year the automobile exacts a casualty list more than twice as great as that incurred by the American Expeditionary Force in the World war.

On the other hand, according to the federal bureau, 2,224 persons were killed, 1,735 in accidents in bituminous and 459 in anthracite mines last year. As the figures, which may be increased on account of injuries which may yet prove fatal, now stand, the mine death rate is $7.5 per million tons of coal production.

These statistics, overlooked in the greater amount of newspaper space given an airplane crash or a mine disaster, should prompt the motor car driver as well as the pedestrian to exercise more care when on the public highways. It pays to stop, look and listen at street intersections as well as railroad crossings.

Letting Bars Down

The United States court of appeals at New York has handed down a decision to the effect that residents of Canada who are employed in the United States may cross the international line without being made subject to immigration regulations.

This decision will have a far-reaching effect at Detroit, where hundreds of men and women are employed in various industries and offices and stores, but who maintain their residence across the river in Windsor and other Canadian towns.

The decision was based on the John Jay treaty of 1794 between the United States and Great Britain, which was interpreted as granting residents on either side of the border the privilege of crossing and recrossing daily to transact business, without the usual immigration restrictions.

Word comes from Washington that no attempt will be made by the Labor department to alter the immigration regulations at the Canadian line as a result of the New York decision, but the decision itself will be immediately appealed to the supreme court. The court of appeals' decision overruled the United States district court at Buffalo, where it had been held that the word "business" in the treaty between this country and Great Britain meant only trading and merchandising.

Should the supreme court sustain the court of appeals' decision, officials of the Labor department admit the federal regulations at the Canadian border will have to be modified.

The Canadian border problem is only one of several other immigration affairs now puzzling the Washington government. There is a movement afoot in congress to place immigration from Mexico and other North American countries on a quota basis, but the senate committee investigating this matter has been told that at least four of the federal departments look with disfavor on the proposed legislation.

Secretary Kellogg is represented as being afraid such a move will affect friendly relations with neighboring republics on the south.

There isn't any question but that some of the states in the southern tier of the United States need the labor which is imported from Mexico and other Latin countries. If a means could be evolved to bring about a regulation of this immigration so that it might be restricted to those men and women who can be assimilated with the least trouble, perhaps such regulations would be worthwhile.

To arbitrarily shut off immigration, or put it on a quota basis, however, does not seem to solve the problem.

In reference to Canadians who immigrate to the United States it would not be wise for congress to place that nation on a quota basis at all, or otherwise restrict immigrants who come up to the usual tests of sanity, health and the like. The Canadians are an Anglo-Saxon people easily assimilated and usually good citizens. They do this nation no harm.

Bees at School

The school trustees at Stony Creek, Ontario, started something new last year when they voted to introduce a hive of honey bees in the school house.

Their idea was that the children would profit, educationally and morally, by observing the busy little bee improving each shining hour. The hive was built with transparent glass walls, so that every phase of the inmates' activity could be freely observed. For some reason or other, bees don't seem to mind such abuse of their privacy any more than goldfishes do. Provision was made so that the bees could come and go about their usual business without hindrance.

It is now reported that the plan works admirably. That hive has been a focus of attentive observation from the day it was installed. The children have learned a great deal about bees and bee culture, and that part of their time at least was well spent, even if they didn't apply the bees' industrious example to all the rest of their school work. So the hive is going to be continued as a part of the school's equipment.

The bees made good, too, in another way. The honey they gathered and stored not only sufficed for their winter needs but provided a surplus which, when sold, more than paid for the original investment and the running expenses of the hive.

It seems a shame that it was considered necessary to sell that honey, even for the thrift lesson it taught. The children should have had the surplus honey to eat with their lunches.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—Thanks to the American spirit of business and to the rise of literacy in this country the art of writing has come into its own from the commercial standpoint. Today a writer is more certain of getting his work published than ever before and what is chiefly remarkable, he can get paid in advance for his short story, book, play, or movie scenario provided he can point to any previous work.

The book purchases of the American people are reaching astounding proportions. Even though the country is well supplied with public libraries and with private circulating libraries, actual sales continue to rain. Nor are sales confined to the cheaper editions. Good books have been made available in all manner of forms. Classics can be purchased for as low as five cents a volume but the $2.50 books also are selling as never before and the sales of books ranging up to $10 are very substantial.

Unless there is some special reason such as the fame and popularity of the author, the subject or the novelty of the book, there is always an element of chance in a publication. This the publisher must assume. There seems to be no way to determine whether a novel will be successful and if so when. The works of Conrad are especially interesting in this connection. Novels of his which did not sell at all when they were new, years later became best sellers. One of the most popular novels of recent years was Bean Geste. Yet this book was published and on the market for approximately a year before it enjoyed much of a sale. After having been neglected for months it achieved popularity overnight and for many apparent reasons.

In contrast to that there is Thornton Wilder's book, The Bridge of San Luis Rey. Although very much out of the ordinary, more of an essay than a tale, but in the form of a novel, this book gained instant attention despite the fact that the author was practically unknown. He had written one book before and now, of course, because of the great popularity of the new book, people are going back to read the first one. Wilder can get advance royalties now.

Royalties are paid on a sliding scale. The standard novel is priced at $2.50. The usual author's royalty is ten per cent on the first 10,000. On the next 5,000 he will probably get twelve and a half per cent and fifteen per cent on all copies over 15,000. This scale may be altered by special agreement. Publishers are in keen competition and where a popular author has written a book for which the public is waiting he can, if he desires, shop around and make almost his own terms.

Trader Horn was an experiment but there is no doubt that, the experiment having proved highly successful, almost any publishing house would give excellent terms on more of the same story.

ABROAD With McIntire

By Frederick J. Haskin

PARIS, March 10.—Nothing is quite so disappointing as Paris night life these days. Of course, it is off season, but even so it is below the average of nocturnal gaiety. So much so the famous Zelli's has been locked and boarded up for three months.

Zelli's is comparable to Texas Guinan's when she was going full tilt. Customers never left until the sun was dappling the boulevards through the chestnut trees. Joe Zelli is an Italian who came to Paris via New York and was immortalized in an old Smart Set story: "Next Door to Zelli's."

He does not greet patrons with "Hello, Sucker!" His formula is different. He stands at the entrance, and when a party enters calls to his head waiter: "The royal box for the Prince!" The tightest of tightwads will not order beer when he thinks he has been mistaken for a member of nobility.

Many haunts still open at midnight for the fugitive patronage. The gigolos are there, and so are the "for hire" dancing girls, but the tables are mostly empty. Paris is becoming a daytime town, and even tourists are following the Parisian custom of early to bed.

Josephine Baker, the dusky Harlem performer who became one of those sporadic "rages," has her own club, but it was half empty the night I was there. Josephine sat at her table with her reputed Italian count, a dapper young person who could pass for Michael Arlen. I feared for his mistress. I thought he would twist it off.

Four other clubs, popular last year, were only one-third filled. The only American I saw in any was Earl Carroll's brother Jim, who sipped a cup of coffee and was merely there to see an Argentine dancer with the idea of booking her for America. "Slick little mortuary chapel," he observed dolefully.

Near Place Pigalle there is a wicked place for those caring for such. It opens at 1 a. m. and drinks are served by girls whose costumes cannot be described for the simple reason they do not wear any. But that is old stuff in Paris. Night life may grow better. It cannot grow worse.

The perfume salons of Paris offer a fragile beauty and grace, but one cat-cornered from the Volpian cafe on rue St. Honore can only be described as exquisite. The entire two-storied front is solid plate glass, save for a narrow nickel support running its width at the second story. The door, too, is glass inset in the nickel sill. I stood in front of it for ten minutes overwhelmed by a destructive and perverted urge to hurl just one brick. I may do it yet if the hotel waiter doesn't stop putting watercress on fried eggs at breakfast.

At Sherry's—where I have found the only good coffee in Paris—came the Lee Owellis, having just arrived from honeymooning at St. Moritz and trying to achieve the nonchalance of settled married folk. Mrs. Owell is Maybelle Manning, one of New York's fashionable modistes, and Mr. Owell is a newspaperman who became vice president of one of New York's largest banks.

This evening I stopped in at 46 rue Nicolo to see Ralph Barton, the ace of American caricaturists, who has taken up permanent residence in a beautiful French home. He is married to an accomplished musician and composer of Paris, receives in a drawing room the size of a skating rink and sports a swell Italian car. There is also a brick walled garden slit with cool gravel paths and—well, I wish I had had the foresight to take up caricaturing.

The French waiter is summoned with the sucking noise we use to call a dog. They don't mind it at all, but scowl at the American custom of tapping the table with a fork.

One misses the veteran scribe, "Hank" Wales, about town. He knows all the places but has departed for Moscow to see what news items he can pick up. From what I hear of Russia I don't envy him.

Lillian Gish and Charlie Chaplin are the favorite cinema stars of Paris.

YOUR HEALTH

An Ounce of Prevention Is Worth A Pound of Cure.

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland.

A short time ago I read this from the pen of William S. Sadler: "Health is a matter of sowing and reaping; we cannot expect an increased health harvest without indulging in a preceding season of intelligent health sowing."

There can be no doubt that the foundation of adult health is laid in childhood. Many a case of chronic indigestion in middle life is the result of the bad eating habits acquired in youth.

This generation is a much healthier and stronger and more vigorous generation than any that has preceded it. The growing boys and girls of today are bigger and stronger than were their parents. It is not at all uncommon to find the child of a father and mother, who are both small in stature, to be big husky, taller than the parents, and better developed in every particular.

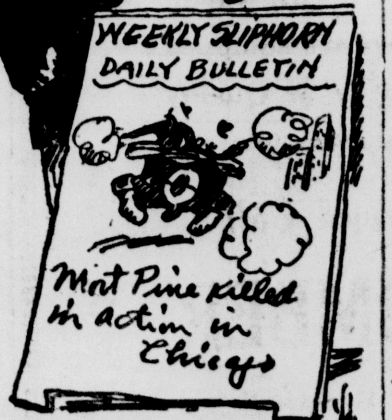

The fact that we are more sturdy and possess a greater expectancy of life than our forefathers, is the result of health education. We are reaping the harvest of increased health because the precepts and seeds of health were sown by our parents. Our practices have been better than were those of our forebears. We have better health and longer life because of the intelligent health sowing.

Boards of health, the public schools, the pulpit and home, food alliances, women's clubs, associations of parents and teachers, the radio and the public press, are sowing the seeds of health. If health is really a matter of sowing and reaping we cannot fail to have an increased health harvest by reason of these health activities.

Everything that a man has will give for his life. When each of us comes to realize that life and health depend upon the giving of attention to the things that make for health, then we will study the problem so that there may be intelligent health sowing.

There can be no doubt that knowledge is power. If we know the rules of hygiene, and then have sense enough to practice them, we will add years to our expectancy of life. We are going to reap what we sow. Common sense should teach us that we cannot have health and vigor if we indulge in overeating, wrong eating, late hours, lack of sunshine and fresh air, all of them favorable to the growth of the seeds of disease.

The Dreamers

—By Truda Dahl.

One glance at them and one is certain they are newlyweds. They are still in that ideally blissful state following the honeymoon. The world has a rosy glow and lies before them in all its splendor and glory. They are lovers, but above all they are mates and, together, hand-in-hand, they are starting out on a thrilling adventure.

Together they are feathering their little love nest. With what loving care and tenderness they set about furnishing their little home! They are about to hang the picture which symbolizes their own wedded bliss, but their heads are still so high in the clouds that they do not yet realize the full significance of it. We are almost inclined to fear for the safety of the picture.

CIVIC MUSIC SEASON ENDS

New York String Quartet and Pianist on Program.

With a program by the New York String quartet and Jose Echaniz, Cuban pianist, the Civic Music association's 1927-28 concert season closed at the Ceramic theatre last night. The largest crowd of the season, according to officers of the association, attended.

Each of the four members of the quartet showed himself to be a master of his instrument and a soloist of distinction, with the added good virtue of willingness to subordinate his individual ambition to the good of the ensemble. There were moments in the program when the rhythm was wrought so evenly that one instrument of the compass of the cello and violin, played by the best expert, could not have produced an effect more homogeneous.

With great dignity and modesty the four artists acknowledged the enthusiastic demonstrations of pleasure unstintingly given by the audience and added many encores. It surpassed all that was anticipated by its perfection of ensemble, its unity of conception, its sense of proportion and its glorious quality at all times.

The numbers of Jose Echaniz, pianist, contributed no small part toward the success of the concert. Though only 20 years of age Echaniz has already been accorded a meed of success that comes to few mature artists. His technique, wonderful rhythmic sense, the vigor and freshness of his interpretations created a sensation. Mr. Echaniz used no music for any of his numbers, playing entirely by memory.

Grant Street P. T. Program.

Vocal solo, Miss Viola Parker, accompanied by Miss Margaret Parker; violin duet, Misses Helen McCoy and Martha Williams; Spanish vocal duet, Rev. and Mrs. O. B. Campbell; song, pupils of the Third grade, accompanied by Miss Betty Lee Jaccard; address, "Languages and Customs of the Mexicans," Rev. O. B. Campbell. Refreshments were served by Mrs. James Welch and her committee. Covers were arranged for nearly 100 guests.

"ASSOCIATION MEN," Y. M. C. A. PAPER, LAUDS SUNDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

W. H. Nagel and Harvey Culp Discussed Plan at International Convention in Washington Three Years Ago.

W. H. Nagel, general secretary of the local "Y," and Harvey Culp, now a student at Columbia university, then a resident of East Liverpool, discussed the formation of such a club at the 42nd International Y. M. C. A. convention held in Washington three years ago.

Discussion at the convention took place on a general turn, with Nagel and Culp remembering the special need in East Liverpool, an industrial city, to supply constructive, wholesome and attractive means to keep young men off the street corners.

On their return to East Liverpool the representatives determined that the only permanent solution must be found by the young men themselves, the magazine story says.

Accordingly they called in five outstanding leaders from among their membership and asked their advice. When they agreed, it was determined to form a primary group of young men to approve the idea, and 21 young fellows, some employed and some in high school, were invited to a dinner. When their approval had been obtained a secondary group was called together, and out of this an organization was formed with five committees.

Lack of space prohibits a detailed outline of the brisk spring campaign that followed, but the following paragraph from the record of preliminary considerations is worth reprinting as a keynote of the Young Men's Division wherever it has attained success:

"It is quite obvious," said this statement, "that the greatest amount of service cannot be rendered to the skeptical and the aloof of any organization if that service is done for them only. It must be done not only FOR but BY them, and must have as a basic motive the spirit of service, the spirit of service which really serves, not merely a nominal one."

In this instance an extremely simple program was adopted, calling for a lecture, music, light refreshments and get together meetings after the conclusion of the formal schedule. How well it worked may be indicated by the statement that it reached a total of 1931 young men, attaining an average of 94 at each meeting. It is interesting also to note that virtually all the addresses might have been classified under the heading "The game of life"--which was the title of one of them.

LET ROAD JOB AT FLORENCE

Lima Company to Pave 8-mile Highway.

Contract for eight miles of paving from Florence, Pa., to the Montour railroad, near the North Star tavern, has been awarded to the Lima Construction company for $560,000, an average of $70,000 a mile.

The contract for the improvement of the road from Florence to Paris, and the West Virginia state line was not properly advertised and the contract was held up for readvertisement as prescribed by law. According to officials of the Pennsylvania State Highway Commission this contract will be let March 23.

The Paris-Florence stretch is approximately 4 1/2 miles and it is expected that the lowest bid will be something near $215,000. This is the William Penn Highway route.

The contract calls for the completion of the Paris-Florence road in 120 days, while the Florence-Montour road must be finished in 140 days. The contracts call for construction to start early in April, which means that the road may be open to traffic early in September.

Specifications of the contract call for a road of eight inches of concrete with brick base, which will be one of the finest roads in this part of the Tri-State district. The contract for the improvement of the Florence-Burgess road, also delayed by improper advertising, is to be let March 28.

The Four-wheel brakes used on the Essex Super-Six are the same type used on costlier cars and assure the maximum brake safety, as well as the softness of control that you associate only with high priced cars. They merely typify the costly car way Essex is built throughout—and you can verify this detail by detail, inside and out, by comparison first with costly cars—and then with cars in the Essex price class.

The Essex Super-Six high-compression motor is patented and exclusive, and is so far as we know the most powerful and efficient motor of its size in the world. It eliminates vibration by preventing its occurrence, and so can sustain high speeds, smoothly, effortlessly and indefinitely.

The beautiful Essex instrument board is of ebony finish, grouping under indirect light, grouping gasoline gauge, oil gauge, speedometer and ammeter. Compare it with the costly car instrument boards—which it is like—and with instrument boards in its price class—which it is decidedly unlike.

NO BOND TRACE

Witness Declares he Never Heard of Securities.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A new account of Republican "high finance" in which the late John T. Pratt of New York, after receiving $50,000 in Sinclair Liberty bonds made a $50,000 cash contribution to the Republican national committee in 1923, was revealed today at the senate inquiry into the Continental Trading company's $3,080,000 "slush funds" by Pratt's business employees.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—All financial records of the Republican national committee for campaigns up to 1923 were destroyed by the late Fred Upham, national treasurer, on the eve of the 1924 campaign, Ir. G. Hipsley, his secretary, testified today at the senate inquiry into the Continental Trading company's $3,080,000 Liberty bond "slush fund."

The records for 1923 and early 1924, Hipsley said, were destroyed in May, 1926, after Upham died.

This revelation blocked efforts of the senate public lands committee to learn what became of a $60,000 Liberty bond fund given Upham by Will H. Hays, who got the bonds from Harry F. Sinclair. Hipsley said he had never heard of the bonds until he read recent newspaper stories.

WILLIS HITS HOSTILE PRESS IN NOON TALK

Senator Turns Guns on Newspaper Chain Opposing Him.

G. O. P. LUNCHEON

Calls Upon Voters to Make Their Own Nominations.

COLUMBUS, O., March 10.—"The question that is presented to the Republican voters of Ohio and the country is: Are they to make their own nominations, free, untethered and unafraid, or are they to permit a chain of newspapers, that have always fought Republican policies and opposed every Republican administration, including that of President Coolidge, to make the nomination (for president of the United States) for them under the threat that, if such authority is not given, these newspapers will swing their influence, whatever it may be, to Governor Al Smith of New York?"

U. S. Senator Frank B. Willis, "favorite son" candidate in Ohio for the Republican presidential nomination, made the above declaration here this afternoon while addressing Willis supporters at a luncheon in the Deshler-Wallick hotel. The luncheon was attended by Republicans from various parts of the state who are aiding Willis in his fight against Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover for Ohio delegates to Republican national convention. These delegates will be chosen at the statewide presidential preference primaries April 24.

"As the campaign proceeds, no doubt the chain newspapers will fully explain their reasons for supporting their candidates for each of the two parties," Willis continued. "Is it because both of these candidates are internationally-minded? Is it to be assumed that their views are the same with reference to the League of Nations? Do these newspapers contend that their candidates entertain similar views with reference to the tariff? Do they claim that the positions of their chosen nominees are similar with reference to the 18th Amendment and its enforcement?"

The first boatload of ten were transferred by Captain Cashman of the Manomet coast guard station. After hours of unsuccessful attempts to launch his surfboat Captain Cashman and his men finally were able to ride the breakers and reach the side of the Robert E. Lee in safety. Side of the ship, including scores of relatives of passengers aboard the stranded liner, lined Manomet beach, and prayed for the success of the undertaking.

Night of Anxiety. The imperiled passengers emerged from a night of anxiety. The Robert E. Lee, in swinging leeward from her course in the gale in an effort to reach the Cape Cod canal, tore a hole beneath the water line and began taking water fast. The graphic story of her peril was told in the pithy sentences of radiograms. From the shore she could be seen but faintly through the driving snow.

The first message stressed the need of immediate assistance but stated: "No panic aboard."

"Still pounding badly. Getting worse. Snap out of it" were among the messages shot from the antenna of the radio of the liner.

"Cannot launch life boats. We are on reef and water too shallow" went back a message to the Tuscarora. Then began to come the reassuring message: "Every one o. k., no panic." Later: "We are lying comfortable now. No immediate danger. Hope we can transfer passengers after dawn."

A message from the U. S. S. Bushnell said: "Standing by until morning. Will make no attempt to take off passengers except in extreme emergency. Seas too heavy for us to approach close."

Steamer Resting Easily. NEW YORK, March 10.—The following radiogram was received today by the Eastern Steamship offices from Captain H. W. Robinson of the distressed steamer Robert E. Lee: "Steamer resting easily in same position. Weather abating. Expect to land passengers at Plymouth about noon."

BOSTON, March 10.—The stranded steamer Robert E. Lee was riding safely through a strong northeast blow this forenoon and in no immediate danger of breaking up, said a radiogram to the Eastern Steamship company from Captain Louis J. Breckenridge of the steamship George Washington.

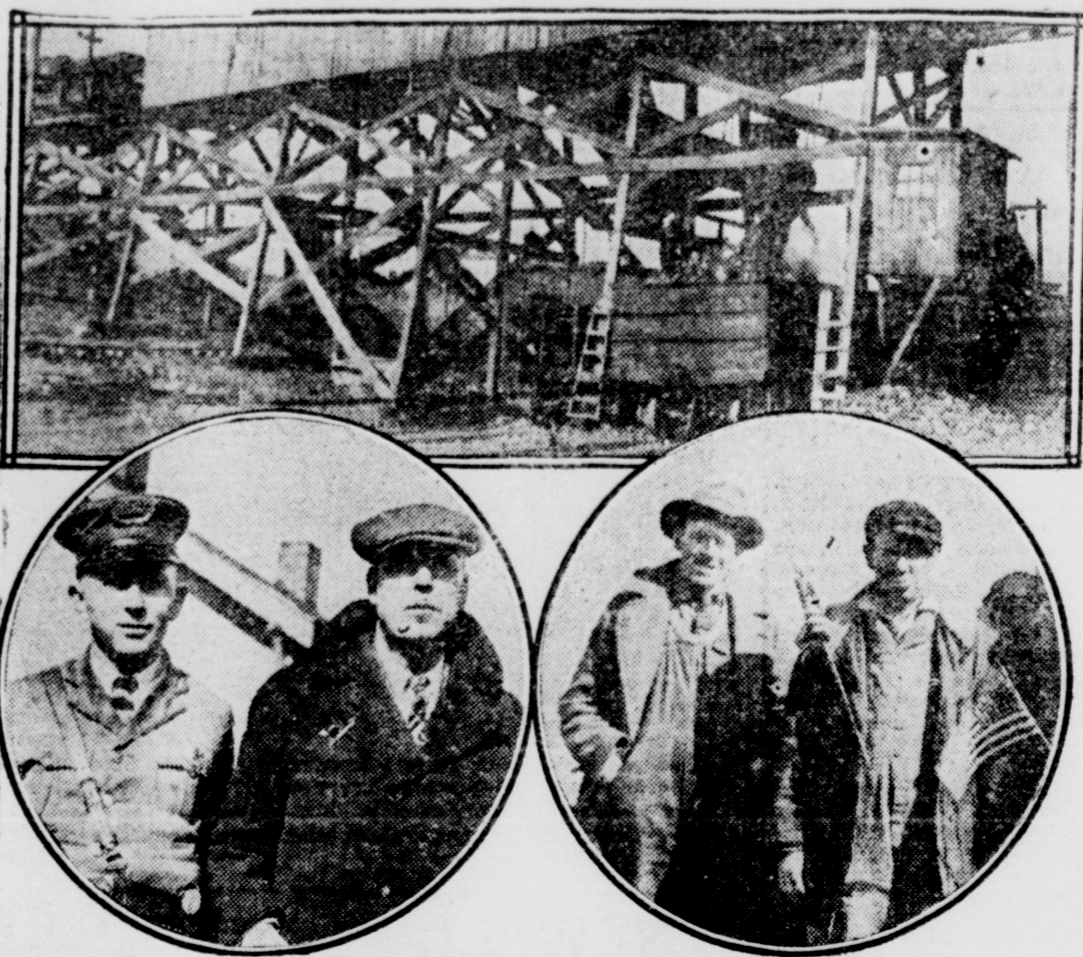

The message read: "Strong northeast wind, sea choppy. No immediate danger. Standing by. Will use oil to calm sea."

SCENE OF LATEST MINE VIOLENCE

International Illustrated News

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O.—Thirteen men were arrested today at the Crabapple mine of the Warner Collieries Company when violence was averted by the prompt arrival of Sheriff C. C. Hardesty and a number of deputies. Over 400 men, women and children lined the road around the tippie and defied officers to disperse them. Eight men were charged with assault with intent to kill, and five were charged with rioting. The grand jury will investigate the charges.

This mine came into prominence this winter when a hundred workers appealed to Gov. Vile Donahay for protection. Roofing nails spread in great quantities makes life hard for the men, workers, and police. About 500 tons of coal per day is mined here.

cells, so woolen mills workers slept in a dormitory, with two guards in the room, and one making the rounds outside. The dormitory is located in the grounds of the prison enclosure near the ball diamonds.

Whitfield's escape was not discovered until after 6 a. m. today, after the night guards had reported off duty. The discovery was made when one of the guards noticed the rope ladder dangling from the outside of the wall. Whitfield entered the penitentiary August 9, 1923.

Killed Dennis Griffin. CLEVELAND, March 10.—Leonard Whitfield, who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary today, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state prison from Cuyahoga county nearly five years ago, for the slaying of Dennis Griffin, Cleveland policeman, May 11, 1923.

Following the murder, the search for Whitfield covered five states. He was finally located hiding in a Detroit lumber yard.

The original charge against Whitfield was theft of spark plugs, and two policemen had been assigned to watch his house. When Whitfield drove into his yard in his own car, the two officers arrested him and Griffin took him in charge, the other policeman leaving in a police car. Later Griffin started with Whitfield, in the latter's own machine, for headquarters.

Buried Victim's Body. Two days afterwards Griffin's body was found in an isolated section of Geauga county, partly buried. His uniform and mace had been burned, and a shovel, which had been used to dig the shallow grave was found nearby.

The subsequent search for Whitfield revealed that he had maintained two homes here, that a young girl with whom he had been keeping company, was missing and that he had drawn his money from a local bank.

He was traced to Toledo, thence to Chicago. The girl was with him, it was said, and he was following his trade—spark plug salesman.

Whitfield was serving a life sentence for the killing of Dennis Griffin, a Cleveland policeman.

Hill, who has been a guard at the penitentiary for about five weeks, was held prisoner at the city prison, for investigation. Penitentiary officials said they knew little of his history before he became a guard. Hill was on guard inside the dormitory, the warden said. H. C. Whippis, Henry Hollander, the outside or turret guards, have been charged by Warden Thomas with neglect of duty.

Kansas City's Racing Awaits Solons' Move

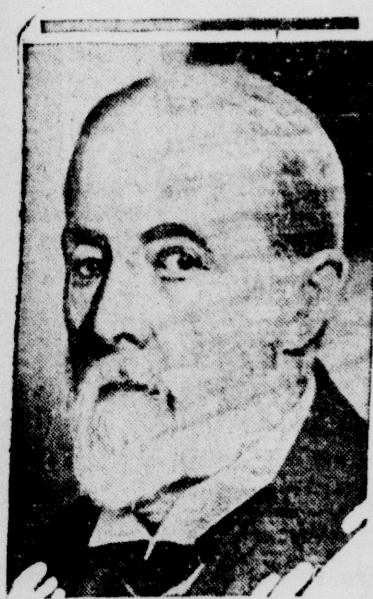

Hold up Plans on Proposed Million Dollar Plant.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 10.—Plans for a new million dollar horse racing plant, which was proposed to supplant the automobile speedway here, are being delayed until the promoters of the project known definitely the outcome of Missouri betting laws.

"Contribution betting" was upheld by the state supreme court last year, following a test case in which H. J. Plotell, of St. Joseph, Mo., was the defendant. Several months later, the court granted a motion for a rehearing of the case at the request of North T. Gentry, attorney-general. Recently Plotell died, causing the case to close automatically without a final decision in the matter. Consequently, Missouri at present, is without legal sanction of betting at the race courses.

A number of racing interests in Missouri, it is understood, are planning a new test case before the supreme court, in an effort to have the betting laws firmly established before Spring.

UNITED STATES MAY CONTROL MARKET OF WORLD, SAYS J. E. WALKER

Ohio Association Secretary Returns From Visit Around Globe on Behalf of Department of Agriculture.

LISBON, March 10.—J. E. Walker, secretary of the Ohio Wool Growers' Cooperative Association, of which the Columbiana County Growers' Association is a part, declares that control of the fine wool market of the world, with Ohio playing an important role, may be the destiny of the United States if scientific research, cooperative production and careful breeding of sheep continue.

Mr. Walker has just returned from a year's trip around the world, during which he visited South Africa, New Zealand and Australia, and France, England and Germany on behalf of the department of agriculture.

Those countries, he said, are turning away from the production of the finer grade of wool, and this country, due to better climatic conditions and other factors, may eventually usurp the world market. Ohio wool is used as a standard for other types and is shipped all over the country, he said.

At the present time the United States, he declared, ship no wool abroad, exporting only a small amount to Russia last year. This country, he said, produces only 55 per cent of its wool consumption, obtaining the remainder from New Zealand, Australia and South Africa. Annually, however, the production is increasing in America. Mr. Walker declared that New Zealand produces annually 185,000,000 pounds, Australia 900,000,000, and South Africa 250,000,000, while the United States produces approximately 280,000,000.

"In the wool producing countries I visited," he declared, "they standardized their wools, and their product is put on the market in a better condition. This is what needs to be done with the American product, graded and sorted."

SURETIES NAMED IN CIVIL SUIT

LISBON, March 10.—Daniel M. Smith and F. L. Custer, sureties on an appeal bond in a case tried before former Justice of the Peace James G. Stevenson in Yellow Creek township, have been made party defendants in a new suit filed in common pleas court by Attorney P. V. Mackall for C. F. Walters against Frank F. Moore.

When this case went to trial here, judgment of the plaintiff for $237.67 and costs, then amounting to $34.85, was rendered. The suit in its original form was for the recovery of an account claimed to be due for groceries. When the defendant did not appear the court rendered default judgment for the plaintiff. Then the appeal was taken with Smith and Custer as sureties.

Collection of the judgment and costs is now sought in the new action. The case is the first of the character that has been filed in common pleas for many months.

SETS PACE IN OUTPUT OF COAL

West Virginia's bituminous coal output for 1927, calculated today by the United States bureau of mines at 151,680,000 tons, placed it for the first time ahead of all other states in the country.

Pennsylvania led in total coal production, however. It produced 211,659,000 tons, of which 80,652,000 were anthracite.

POET IN "WHO'S WHO," WITH SICK WIFE AND CHILD, FACES EVICTION

NEW YORK, March 10.—This is just another story of a poet in a garret.

There are three inches of compact printing about Harry James Stutzlen and his beautiful poetry in the exclusive "Who's Who in America." But what is that to a landlord? Stutzlen owes $43 for back rent today.

Stutzlen has a pretty wife just back from the hospital with a new baby. In the dingy garret where the poet spins his dreams there is another child, 17-months-old Joy, and a jagged hole in his window-pane. Joy became ill from the draught through the broken window. Stutzlen pleaded to have it repaired. The landlord refused, and what is more, demanded of Stutzlen to pay the rent or get out.

"For six weeks that pane was smashed," said Stutzlen. "I have no money. My wife was in the hospital with the new baby. I could not leave Joy's crib to go out and hunt for wood. The minute I'd leave she'd throw off her coverings in the face of that wind through the hole."

"Then the landlord came to demand money. I hit him."

A magistrate heard the story and gave Harry five days to raise the money. The court was kind about it but the law's the law.

"I'm desperate," said Henry today. "The critics write me letters praising my work but I cannot make money from it. I haven't even money for subway fare. There are others who get a gun and go down into the rich forties. Others go down to the river front. Maybe..."

Stutzlen wrote war poems for the government but refused to take any remuneration for his work. His most famous ones are included in "They Shall Not Pass."

MOTORCYCLIST FATALLY HURT

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., March 10.—Lloyd Lahn, 19, of Dover, is dead today after being discovered unconscious on the New Philadelphia-Strassburg road late last night.

The youth was found beside a wrecked motorcycle, about a mile south of Strassburg. He died without regaining consciousness but is believed to have been riding the motorcycle when crowded off the road by an automobile. The coroner is investigating.

HINDU MYSTIC AT AMERICAN

Two Indian robes, one an antique court robe of velvet gorgeously embroidered in gold, said to be over 200 years old and a ceremonial robe, once worn by the Amir of Afghanistan, are part of an interesting collection of Indian objects of art belonging to Punjab, the Hindu mystic, who is to appear at the American theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Included in the collection is the sword which it is reputed was used to burn out the eyes of the architect who designed the beautiful Taj Mahal of India. A Hindu prayer drum, a bolo knife, carved ivory and other interesting articles are part of the collection which is on display at the Ross store.

BETTY BRONSON IN ANOTHER HIT

"Brass Knuckles" comes to the American theatre Monday for a run of three days. It is a Warner Bros. production and Monte Blue and Betty Bronson are starred. The story and scenario were written by Harvey Gates, and Lloyd Bacon directed.

Scenes in prison, in the tenements, the courts, and the homes of the poor of a great city, provide locale for "Brass Knuckles." The story is of a tenement lad who is wrongly imprisoned, and while in jail incurs the hatred of a fellow inmate, who hounds his after-life, trying to separate him from the motherless wife for whom he is caring.

Hardfisted, tender, humorous, pathetic, running the whole gamut of human passions, "Brass Knuckles" is a story hard to forget. Monte Blue and Betty Bronson do splendid work in the stellar roles, and the cast includes William Russell, George Stone, Paul Panzer and Jack Curtis. Having seen "Brass Knuckles" you'll want all your friends to see it.

The American is showing for the last time tonight, I heard Barthelme in what is perhaps the greatest emotional drama of all time, "The Noose." "Corrine and Her Revue of Revues" also are on the bill.

C. & P. RAILROAD DIVISION TO BE RECHRISTENED NEXT WEEK

CLEVELAND END OF NAME WILL BE RETAINED

Greater Recognition to Terminal of Pennsy Line.
263-MILE UNIT
Pittsburgh Division to Extend as Far as Altoona.

C. & P. division of the Pennsylvania railroad, constituting a section of the company's main line between Cleveland and Pittsburgh, will be rechristened next week, according to unofficial reports reaching Wellsville today.

Known as the "C. & P." for more than half a century when the first engine poked its nose along the newly built tracks past Wellsville, the name, it is understood, will be changed to the Cleveland division.
The change, it is planned, will give greater recognition to one of the largest and most progressive cities on the company's lines. The Pittsburgh end of the title will be preserved in the Pittsburgh division, extending eastward from Pittsburgh to Altoona, Pa.
The Cleveland division extends almost due south from Cleveland to Marietta, with a fork east at Bayard, O., joining the main line of the Port Wayne route at Rochester, Pa.
From Alliance and Ravenna to Cleveland it forms a part of the present through route between Pittsburgh and Cleveland.
Between Rochester, Pa., Bayard, Ohio, and Ravenna, the division follows the line of the old Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad which now forms an alternate route for through Pittsburgh-Cleveland trains.
That part of the Cleveland division extending from Newcomerstown, O., south to Marietta, was formerly operated as the Marietta division. This division was discontinued in January, 1924, and its territory combined with the Cleveland division.
A total of 263 miles of main line and 782 miles of track are included in the Cleveland division.

Additional Sport Carrigan Discerns Talent In Cicero, Eastern Rookie

Sixteen-year-old Atlantic City Youth Looks Like "Comer"; Looks Good at Third and Can Hit.

EDITORS NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with developments in various major league training camps. Other articles of the series will follow.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 10—Say "yes" and the first thing you know you are a come-on; say "no" and, pronto, you are a big banker, doing things in a big way or something. Say both with reasonable intelligence and maybe you belong in the White House.
And then again, life being the comical pastime it is, you may be the manager of the Boston Red Sox.
The writer interviewed Bill Carrigan today, with the following result:
Q—What do you think of your Red Sox?
A—Yes.
Q—How would you rate the American league teams on what they have shown to date?
A—No.
This really was all I wished to know, so I thanked the gentleman kindly and rushed agog to the wire with the story. These garrulous Irish—how they do talk on.
Little To Talk About.
However, and that, I wish to say that I found the interview both illuminating and instructive. It reminded me of the fact that the Bill Carrigan, manager, was William F. Carrigan, banker, in those off years when great Red Sox had ceased to be. His days then were "yes" and "no" days and maybe this form of intercourse has become habitual.
More probably, however, it is due to the fact that Bill Carrigan is more than passing shrewd and, in consequence, he realizes that he has little to talk about, anyway. He is the manager of an eighth place ball club.
Twelve years ago the Red Sox were world's champions, a great ball club with a great manager, kindly unassuming and very mild. Bill Carrigan still is just that kind of a manager but, unfortunately, the Red Sox aren't that kind of a club.
But ball players will tell you that no team long can remain horizontal with Carrigan at its head. The Sox failed to get out of last place in 1927, the first year of his comeback; they figure they will do it this season.
Cicero Looks Like Comer.
At that, they practically are the same club, so there is nothing definite on which to base such a hope and the impression I gained from Carrigan is that he is wasting neither time nor thought with idle fancies of that sort.
"We are learning to play ball," was his dry comment. "With some players it takes time. I can't say how long it will take with mine."
At this juncture there was evidence that a spontaneous expression of some kind was struggling for utterance against his better judgment.
"I will say this," he finally declared, and I judged that better judgment had lost. "This kid, Joe Cicero, looks like a comer."
Inquiry developed the fact that the young man is named Joseph Doughty Cicero, that he hails from Atlantic City, played with Easton, Penna., last year and that he really is a young man, indeed. He is only 16 years old but either is ready at this moment or is getting ready with great haste. He is a third baseman and, in addition to looking the part of a very natty pattern at the position, he has been hitting them out of all reason, to say nothing of several ball parks.
Pitching Not So Bad.
Cicero, I gather, is exhibit A, on this ball club. Exhibit B are the pitchers. Offhand, it would appear that exhibit C is gone for the day.
Bryan Harrison, human telescope from Bangs, Texas, Dan Macayden, Somerville, Mass.; Charley Ruffing, Nokomis, Ill.; Jack Russell, Paris, Texas, and Harold Wiltse, Clay City, Ill., were a better than average pitching staff last year. They still are, but just by way of emphasis and for good measure, they may be joined by Herb Bradley and Cliff Garrison, right handers from Agenda, Kans., and Tempe, Ariz., respectively. Both look particularly well down here. So does Ed Morris, who pitched some 57 games in two years at Mobile.
Still another good one is Merle Settemire, of Lakeview, Ohio, who also is up from Mobile. Merle is a left hander. John Wilson, of Thomaston, Georgia, up from Waterbury, and Bob Cremins, left hander, with the club last year, have better than an outside chance of sticking. Of course, some of these worthies must go but nobody around here seems to know just whom, how and when.
Rest of Them the Same.
Yes, the Red Sox are ahead of the game on pitching. But otherwise, they are pretty much the same outfit that finished a bad last in 1927. The old infield of Phil Todd, at first base; Bill Rogan, at second; Jack Rothrock, at shortstop, and Bill Rogell, at third, is due to operate again. Maybe the operation will be one of those "successful" ones in which the patient considerably dies for these lads are no better than fair. Buddy Myer, Elkhartville, Miss., and Russell Rollings, 1927, utility men, will be 1928 utility men, too.
Cicero, of course, is a distinct possibility, although he still is a year away. Paul Hinson, up from Joplin, isn't likely to tarry long, however.
Freddie Hoffman, St. Louis, and Johnny Heving, Covington, Ky., have returned as first string catchers, which means that the Sox are fairly well protected in that sector. Charley Berry, former Lafayette star and, looks like the third man, although he is getting something of a rally from Ed Connolly, Brooklyn semi-pro. Ed Doherty, Holy Cross man, is running last in this race, if any.
Ken Williams, the reformed, St. Lousian; Danny Williams, back again from Mobile, and Ira Flagstead, 1927 survivor, will compose the regular outfield. This combination, too, is merely fair, provided you are not feeling too captious. George Loepp and Doug Talft also are around but nothing in particular is being done about it. In fact Arlie Tarbert, Columbus, Ohio, specimen, looks like the extra outfielder. He came up last year and contrived to stick.

Davey Abad, Panama featherweight, outpointed Tommy Ryan, Buffalo (10).
Jack Manley, Syracuse lightweight, won from Eddie (Kid) Wagner, Philadelphia (10).

Potters Reach Tourney Semi-finals By Defeating New Philly

Battle Dover Champs In Afternoon Contest

Guard Eddie Bloor Again Leads Scorers With 13 Points; Rates Consideration as All-tourney Star.

NEW CONCORD, March 10.—District championship visions flitted before the eyes of East Liverpool basketball enthusiasts here last night following the Pottery City scholastic team's overwhelming victory over New Philadelphia, 26 to 10, in a second round contest.

Letting the New Philadelphia outfit down with two field goals, the Blue and White clad team from the far eastern end of the state earned a place in the semi-finals which will be staged this afternoon.

The tournament program will come to a close tonight with the last and final game when the winners of this afternoon's semi-finals contests go on for the championship.

That the lower bracket will produce the champion was the almost unanimous opinion of tourney followers here last night.

In the first game this afternoon at 3 o'clock the upper bracket contenders, Bellaire and Coshocton, will play, followed at 3 o'clock by the leaders in the lower group, East Liverpool and Dover. These are the four teams that have survived the milling that started Thursday night with 15 teams in the race.

Dover or East Liverpool? One of this pair will wind up with the championship, tourney experts feel confident, but those who make their selections according to judgment are rather dubious as to which to line up with. The Dover five looked East Liverpool on the Dover court about mid-season, it is recalled. But, it is also a fact that Cambridge Dover an awful drubbing by a 25-13 score, and what East Liverpool has done to Cambridge seems to be pretty well known by this time.

Condition Is Factor. That the condition of the players, rather than ability, may have considerable bearing on the ultimate result is also a factor in predictions.

Dover met two very tough hoppers yesterday in Steubenville and Zanesville, and while disposing of both, tourney followers are confident that the victories took their toll.

The Steubenville game especially was very rough and the Doves finished with a slightly shop-worn appearance.

In the Zanesville encounter last night they got through by the skin of their biceps, if any, winning from Zanesville, an ex-state champ, by a score of 31 to 29, in an overtime contest. That hurt, too.

Dover led, 5 to 3, in the first quarter, but took an awful trimming in the second period. Fans were predicting curtains for last year's champs when the half ended, 17 to 7, in favor of Zanesville. But the Herman proteges rallied between halves and cut down the gap, the score being 22-18 at the end of the third period. With a last desperate attack they hit the wire on even terms with Zanesville as the gun blew the end of the game with the tally.

Edwards On Eagles' Mitt Card

Hard Hitting Chester Welter to Battle East End Lad.

REDDY EDWARDS, the Chester welterweight who has been clipping chips at a lively rate in the Eagles' arena here in recent weeks, will make his third appearance before district fight fans on Monday night in a four-round preliminary to the Cuddy DeMarco-Steve O'Malley battle.

Edwards, an amateur, has two wins to his credit in his first two appearances on the canvas in the Broadway lodge home.

He recently earned the decision over Ray Mitchell, local slugger, in four rounds, showing both a punishing wallop and a capable defense.

In Monday night's mill he is scheduled to take on Monk Lee, of the East End, and some of the ringside habitués who appear to know both lads and their fighting capabilities.

Well enough to forecast, express the opinion that the West Virginian is going to have his hands full.

Toughy Goodballet, another East End, is a new candidate for ring honors on the Monday card, along with Lee.

Goodballet will make his glove debut against Kid Francis, the clever Wellsville puncher. They are scheduled for four rounds in the curtain raiser.

E. L.-Wellsville Girls to Play Prelim Game

Alumni Against Highs; Tickets on Sale.

Two preliminaries are on the bill to precede the clash between Thorpe's Indians and Bill Powell's aggregation of cage stars here next Wednesday night and to say that the opening contest of the evening between East Liverpool Ex-High and Wellsville High girls won't stir up the dust would be untruthful.

Both lineups show plenty of class. Miss Beulah Skidmore who is rounding up the local Alumni, will have Imbrie and Cooper for forwards; Vorndran and Waggle for centers; Hill and Goodballet as guards, and Cochran and Huss as reserves.

The Wellsville school lineup will be virtually intact with Irwin and Dornick on the forwards; Connor and Lewis at the centers; and Daugherty and Housh at the guards.

This combination represents one of the strongest girls' teams that has represented the Orange in many years.

This game will be followed by a scuffle between the East Liverpool Sigma Deltas and the Wellsville Epworth Leaguers.

Reserved seat tickets for the games went on sale today at Heime's, Smith News and Fleming's, in the city, and Frank Huff's Drug Store and Chester News Depot, in Chester.

TWO GOOD GAMES ON "Y" COURT

Two good games are billed in the Sunday school basketball league to-night on the Y. M. C. A. floor.

The Lutherans and the Methodists, Protestants, natural rivals, will clash in one and the Presbyterians and St. Stephens in the other.

The opener is scheduled for 7:15.

RAIL QUINTETS AT SEMI-FINALS

CLEVELAND, March 10.—Indianapolis, Toledo and Gibson, Ind., the only survivors of the Men's teams in the first day play of the New York Central railroad basketball tournament here, will meet in the semi-finals today.

Of the girls' teams, Cleveland will meet Detroit. The latter are the present girl champions of the New York Central.

The Detroit girl champions had no difficulty in defeating Chicago Junction yesterday, 30 to 10. The Cleveland girls swamped the New York Misses, 50 to 11.

The defeat of the crack Urbana, Ill., Men's team by the unheralded Charleston, W. Va., five by a score of 57 to 30 was the biggest upset of the opening day.

The closest match yesterday was when Toledo nosed out Chicago, 23 to 22.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, has until next Tuesday to accept the California lightweight's New York challenge and a fight in New York. If he sticks to Mullen there will be no lightweight title fight here but McLarnin will be matched with Billy Wallace or possibly Ruby Goldstein.

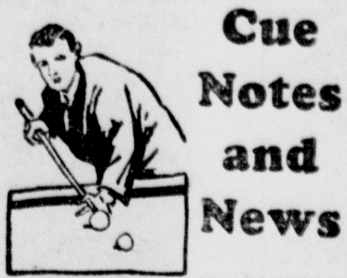

NEW ORLEANS, March 10.—The Cleveland Indians open their exhibition season here today with the New Orleans Pelicans. Wesley Ferrell, 29-year-old rookie, will be the starting pitcher for the Indians at the request of General Manager Billy Evans, who liked the youngster's work so well in the practice game Thursday he asked to see more of him.

Favored to Win Again.

CHICAGO, March 10.—Frank Taborski of Schenectady, N. Y., defending champion, Ralph Greenleaf of Philadelphia, and Erwin Rodolph of Chicago, only undefeated players in the national round-robin pocket billiards championship tournament here, were favored to win again today.

Taborski meets Andrew Ponzi of Philadelphia; Greenleaf plays Peter Durocher of Chicago, and Rodolph crosses cues with Harry Oswald of Pittsburgh. Pasquale Natalie of Baltimore will play Joseph Concannon of Washington, N. D., in the fourth match on today's card.

In a slashing attack on the Ivories last night, Andrew Ponzi defeated Harry Oswald, 125 to 91. Ralph Greenleaf, though wobbly in several innings, managed to keep his record clear by beating Harry Wood of Duluth, 125 to 116.

TEMPTS TUNNEY WITH LOUGHRAN

NEW YORK, March 10.—The services of Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, have been offered to Tex Rickard as an opponent to Gene Tunney next June in the event that the heavyweight eliminations do not produce an outstanding contender. Joe Smith, manager of Loughran, made the offer to Jess McMahon, Madison Square match maker.

McMahon meanwhile obtained Loughran's consent to fight the winner of the light heavyweight battle between Leo Lonski and Joe Sekyra on March 30. The title match probably will be staged at the Garden on May 4.

YANK REGULARS LICK YANNIGANS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 10.—Ex-pitcher Henry Johnson, who was to have started against the Boston Braves next Monday in the Yankees' first exhibition game, was a crestfallen rookie today.

The Yankee regulars walloped him for nine runs in one inning and beat the Yannigans, 11 to 3, in their first practice game. Gehrig and Paschal got two hits in one inning, while Babe Ruth, who always plays with the asters, got only one single during the afternoon.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the club, will arrive today with Waite Hoyt and will endeavor to sign the holdout pitcher.

URNS DOWN BIG CHICAGO OFFER

NEW YORK, March 10.—Pop Foster, manager of Jimmy McLarnin, has definitely declined the $50,000 offer from Jim Mullin for McLarnin to fight Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, in Chicago. He wired the Chicago promoter his regrets after a conference with Tex Rickard.

Rickard convinced Foster that Mullin could not hire Soldier Field, pay Mandell 50 per cent and guarantee McLarnin $50,000 without somebody taking a deficit.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, has until next Tuesday to accept the California lightweight's New York challenge and a fight in New York. If he sticks to Mullen there will be no lightweight title fight here but McLarnin will be matched with Billy Wallace or possibly Ruby Goldstein.

Campbell To Defend Title Here

Paulsey's Five Probable Tournament Entry.

CAMPBELL Merchants basketball team, Tri-State district amateur champions by virtue of their triumph in the district tournament held in East Liverpool last March in all probability will defend their title when 30 or more of the leading cage aggregations of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio battle it out here again on March 30-31.

Communication from Mayor T. Roy Gordon, of Campbell, who will manage the Merchants if they appear here, inquiring for tourney particulars, has been received by Registrar O. E. Greenawalt.

And in all likelihood Tony Paulsey and Bill Minehart, outstanding performers with the Merchants as they cut a wide swath through tourney ranks last year, leaving victim after victim in their wake, will appear with the Campbellites, although this pair are so heavily dated up for games here, there and elsewhere that they probably will have to do some light figuring to sandwich in a couple more.

Paulsey and Minehart are playing with the Big Y five at Youngstown regularly and with other teams in the district intermittently.

The Youngstowners are billed in Columbus today to settle the matter of a state Y. M. C. A. championship and, if they are successful there, they'll go to Cincinnati for the national finals. If the Cincinnati dates do not conflict with the tourney dates here, then Paulsey will undoubtedly appear in East Liverpool tourney contests, either with the Merchants or the "Y" aggregation.

Greenawalt is receiving inquiries in almost every mail from teams throughout the entire district. A number of the valley teams competed recently at Wheeling and in a week or so they'll have a tournament over in Canton.

With these preliminary events out of the way the pick of the teams of the entire district will congregate in East Liverpool for the championship contests.

Sharkey Still 3-5 Favorite To Lick Risko

Both Wind up Training for Tuesday's Scrap.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Jack Sharkey and Johnny Risko will complete their training today for their important fifteen-round bout here Monday night.

Yesterday Sharkey boxed two four-minute rounds with Italian Jack Herman and three with Lou Bogash, Bridgeport, Conn., middleweight. He added five three-minute rounds of rope skipping and bag punching. This morning he did five miles on the roads and winds up his boxing this afternoon.

Risko punched a dummy for two rounds and boxed three rounds each with Frankie Lennon and Jeff Balk-night. The pudgy Cleveland baker thinks training is unnecessary. He plods along with his sparring partners and is never sensational.

Sharkey is still a 3 to 1 favorite, despite the fact that Risko, in his last year of fighting, has dropped decisions only to Tommy Loughran and Tom Heeney.

Sharkey has been idle while Risko has been fighting every few weeks. Jack made his last good fight almost a year ago when he knocked out Maloney. Since then he has lost to Dempsey and fought a draw with Heeney.

Antlers Down Quakers; Clash Again on Monday

Third and Deciding Game of County Amateur Loop Series to be Staged at Addison Hall, Salineville.

Championship of the Columbiana County Amateur Basketball League will be determined on Monday night when the East Liverpool Elks and the Damascus Quakers clash in the third and deciding contest at Addison Hall, Salineville, a neutral floor.

The Antlers, losing the opener at Damascus, evened up the series here last night when they took the Quakers by a score of 31 to 25.

The Antlers won a basketball battle that changed from a setup to the real article of floor sport.

For the first two quarters, Smith Anderson and his assistants made the Quakers look like class Z basketballers, the Antlers playing circles around the Quaker tribe.

But in the third period, and part of the final quarter the locals seemed to go stale while the Quakers playing improved. From a lead of ten points the Elks held at the end of the first half the Antlers' margin was cut during the third period and the first five minutes of the last period to an even score, the count being 24-all with five minutes to go.

With prospects of defeat before their eyes the Antlers got busy. They began to play the basketball they played in the first half. Smith Anderson dribbled around the Quakers' defense and sank the goal that put the Antlers in the lead. On the next tossup Joe Canne bagged another two-point shot with a toss near the basket. "Bus" Crawford, getting the ball near the center, dribbled through for two more points. Grice cut the Elks' lead with a penalty fling. Canne made it 31 to 25, shooting in the only charity point that the Elks made during the game.

The Antlers were way off when it came to score points on foul chances. Out of twelve chances from the foul lines they made but one.

The Quakers were somewhat better on their foul chances, making five out of 13 tosses.

The honors of the game go to Crawford and Anderson. They not only formed a guard defense that was hard to score upon but on the attack they came through with field goals when the Elks needed them the most. Canne followed Anderson and Crawford in all-around playing. Despite the effects of illness, Joe not only played rings around his opponents, but was the scoring star of the game, swishing the ball through the cords for five buckets and a charity toss. All the rest of the Elks played bangup basketball and were real factors in the victory.

Grice, Gilbert and Coy were the real performers for the Quakers. Grice with four baskets and three foul goals being the Quakers' scoring ace.

Wilson fouled Grice right at the start and Grice made the point.

Anderson tossed in a one hander from the side, putting the Antlers in front. Crawford and Pusey came through for buckets making the score 6 to 1. Gilbert bagged the next two baskets of the game, putting the Quakers in the game. Canne registered putting the Elks in front, 19 to 5. Pusey cashed in on a running shot, the tally being 12 to 5 when the first period was up. Not much scoring was done in the second period. Canne swished in another Antler basket. Gilbert got a foul point for the Quakers. Crawford and Anderson's tosses were good for two more field goals, giving the Elks a lead of ten points. Grice and Coy sent the leather through for field baskets, bringing down the Elks' margin. Wilson got his only field goal of the game, the Antlers leading, 20 to 10 when time was up for the first half.

Stolen Idols

A Romance of the Sea
By Frank L. Packard.

"If ever there was a literal hell on earth it was there that night," he said. "The wind brought us down sounds from the junk that would make your blood run cold. They didn't seem to be just human sounds—it was as though the junk itself seemed to moan. Once in a while a cry came—a horrible cry, as if from unendurable torture. But there were always those ghastly sounds rising and falling—like a chorus of damned souls in torment. They never stopped."

"We stood it for a bit. Tom's face was white. So was Scarface's. I guess mine was, too. 'There's something wrong over there,' said Tom—and kind of flung a question at us with his eyes. Scarface nodded, and so did I. 'All right,' said Tom, 'get your revolvers and come along.'"

"I don't think they saw us coming, but anyway we had our little dinghy alongside, and had clambered up on the deck of the junk before any one interfered with us. And then suddenly a young Chinaman with maybe ten or a dozen others at his back clustered around us. But we knew by then what it was all about. Right where we were standing was an open hatch—a flash of lightning showed it to us—that had a sort of iron grill over it. I ain't up to describing what I saw. It turns me sick now when I think of it, and I ain't going to tell you any more than is necessary. The junk was in the coolie trade, so called—a slave junk, in plain English. So much a head the wretches brought—like cattle—only they stowed 'em and handled 'em worse than cattle. And I'm telling you now that no man with any guts in him would have stood by with his hands in his pockets and looked at that sight; but I don't think any one of the three of us realized what was going to happen."

"It was like looking at the mouth of hell. Every inch of that grill was filled with squirming, writhing, agonized faces—most of their mouths were open both to send out cries and moans, and to gasp in a breath of air. I don't know how many of them. They must have been standing on the shoulders and heads of those below them, and fighting frantically to hold their places, for all the upturned faces were jerking about and moving constantly as though beneath them some ceaseless struggle was going on. And some of the faces were bloody, and some were sickeningly filthy beyond the filthy that one talks about, and all were thin, emaciated and gaunt with nigh starvation, and mad with torture. They must have been packed below so thick that there was no room to lie down unless they lay on one another. You don't need to be told what that meant. And, besides that, some of 'em down there must already have been dead. I don't know how long the junk had been at sea. The stench turned our stomachs, and—"

The old man stopped abruptly. His tongue touched the grim lips of him as though they were parched and dry. He motioned toward his empty glass.

For the second time Bob Kingsley filled it, and for the second time his father drained it almost at a gulp.

"We saw a lot, eh in a lightning flash?" Robert Kingsley flung out hoarsely. "Well so would you! I've wakened up at night many a time since with the damned smell in my nostrils and the cries in my ears, and the sight of it all as vivid before my eyes as it was that night. Did I say anything about the hands clawing at the iron grill with bony fingers that had just a covering of skin on them? Aye, we saw a lot in a lightning flash—and we saw something more'n I've told you, too—at least Tom did. The grill was fastened down to the deck over a sort of combing with a bolt and shackle, and—"

"But I'll come to that in a minute."

"All I've told you is what we saw in the few seconds we stood there with the crew of the junk gathering around us. And then the young Chinaman spoke—and, as I said before, if it hadn't been for the Mongol face of him, you'd have sworn it was an English voice talking to you. There was an ugly note in it, though."

"You come from that little sloop over there, I presume?" he said. "May I ask what the hell you are doing here, and which of you is the leader whom I have to thank for this unexpected visit?"

"I can see Tom's face now. I was white with the fury of it all. 'I am, you stinking swine!' he roared out. 'And Tom Kingsley's my name; and we came.'"

CHAPTER 8.

Nobody could hear the rest of what he said because his voice was drowned out by a sudden access of cries and moans from the iron grill. I saw the Chinaman motion to some of his followers, but I didn't understand for a moment what he was up to. He raised his voice, addressing Tom over the row.

"Let me complete the introduction," he said. "I am Hsi Yan, the owner of this vessel. I must, I am afraid, apologize for the unseemly behavior of my passengers, but they will soon be pacified, and—"

"He didn't get any farther. The means and cries had turned into screams and shrieks. And then the lightning flashed again. Two of Hsi Yan's men had whips with long knotted lashes on bamboo handles, and they turned faces at the grill, and where the lashes fell the blood spouted."

"By God," Tom shouted, "we'll not stand for this!"

"He had his revolver in his hand, and with the butt of it he started to knock away the bolt from the shackle and loosen the grill. Hsi Yan made a rush at him with a knife. Scarface Sweeney threw himself in front of Tom, and a swinging blow from Hsi Yan's knife opened Scarface's cheek around in a half circle from the corner of his lip to the corner of his eyes. That's where he got the scar that's given him his name. Hell was loose in a second then—Tom had freed the bolt. The coolies poured out from the hold in a torrent, making demoniacal noises. I don't know how many of them. In the darkness and the weird flashes of lightning there seemed to be a hundred or more. They had nothing to fight with except their bare hands, but they didn't need anything else—there were enough of them. In five minutes the deck was a shambles, and Hsi Yan's crew were literally torn to pieces. We had to fight for our own lives—and nearly 'em before the three of us got outside into our boat—aye, and to save ourselves, we even had to shoot some of the poor wretches we'd tried to rescue. In the darkness and in their madness they didn't make any distinction after the first minute or so between us and Hsi Yan's lot. Hsi Yan and his men fought like tigers, of course, but we figured there wasn't one of them left alive when it was over."

"We got back to the sloop. The coolies were crazed, I supposed, with the one idea of clinging to their freedom—I can't account for it in any other way. Perhaps they thought there was a settlement near at hand ashore, and that they might be attacked and recaptured. I don't know. Anyway, they put out to sea, poor devils, and probably went to the bottom. So far as I know, the junk was never heard of again."

"As I said, we thought Hsi Yan and all his crew had gone under, and it wasn't until three months later in Singapore when Tom got that letter that we knew that Hsi Yan had escaped. I don't know how, unless he had managed to swim ashore—but the 'how' of it doesn't matter. What counts is that he escaped. He picked out Tom, of course, because he looked on Tom as our leader, and the one who was responsible for our having gone aboard the junk that night. I think he looked on Scarface and me as having simply obeyed orders—not that he had it in for us, to—but Tom was 'Captain Tom,' if you understand what I mean."

Bob Kingsley's face was hard.

"Yes, I see," he said in a flat tone. "And then? The years after that until now? Didn't you ever see this Hsi Yan again?"

Robert Kingsley shook his head.

"No," he said. "I never seen him from that day to this. We heard of him, though, from time to time—always sticking to the sea and a junk apparently. What he was up to I can't say; but I'll lay every pound I've got it was always something rotten, because it couldn't have been anything else. At first we kept our fingers crossed and our eyes skinned thinking the devil really meant what he wrote Tom; but as year after year went by and nothing happened, and as rumors from here and there reached us that Hsi Yan was becoming fat and rich we figured that, even in the letter wasn't all bluff in the first place, he had become too well content with his lot, which unquestionably involved criminality of some sort, to stir up any trouble and run any risk of inviting police attention to himself by attempting to revenge himself on Tom."

'DRESS PARADE' SCREEN WINNER

West Point Academy Story and Revue at Ceramic.

"Dress Parade," Donald Crisp's production for Pathe-DeMille of the activities of a cadet at the United States Military academy at West Point, in which William Boyd stars, will headline the bill at the Ceramic theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This story of the picturesque army school on the Hudson, said to be one of the greatest features ever screened, will be offered in conjunction with the Four Musical Kings, appearing in the Sunshine revue on the stage. Led by Arthur Hauks, who is a mandolin and banjo player par excellence, the quartette offers a program of harmony different from the usual instrumental numbers featured in the productions of today. Barney Kleeber, Claude Reed and Tom Collins complete the harmony four, whose playing and singing score the biggest hits in the revue. Tom Collins' comedy antics carry his audience into the realms of laughter during the entire production. In addition to the Musical Kings, the Sunshine revue features Alice Turner, the dainty soubrette, Billy Cullen and the Sunshine Beauty Chorus, with elaborate scenery and costume effects.

"Dress Parade" was written by two graduates of West Point. Each officer and cadet stationed at the academy cooperated with Mr. Crisp and members of his unit to the fullest extent. Scenes were taken to the various buildings, including the Main Administration Building, Cullum Hall, Mess Hall and other points of interest, and at last a real story of West Point has been pictured.

Bessie Love is featured opposite William Boyd and other members of the cast include Hugh Allan, Louis Natheaux, Clarence Geldert and Maurice Ryan. The picture is said to be packed with thrills.

HINT OHIO GAS TAX TEST FIGHT

CLEVELAND, March 10.—Constitutionality of the Ohio gas tax law today was questioned by the Columbia Refining company, on the ground that a suit now pending in the United States supreme court, involving the state of Mississippi, would affect this state if the high court decides against the Mississippi tax.

Officials of the Columbia Company here hired that the Ohio law might be attacked when, in paying the January tax for the Superior Oil company, a subsidiary, it was emphasized that the payment was being made under protest and that the company reserved the right to recover providing the law is declared unconstitutional.

Stocking manufacturers of Leicester, England, are in such need of trained help that they file applications months ahead of time for girls attending elementary schools.

War troubles in China have reduced egg-products exports $1,000,000 a year.
